Three months have passed and frequent letters told of Oswin's good behavior. He had gained a promotion since his coming, and now held in conjunction with his former duties, a position of more trust. Five menths more and there was a perceptible decrease in the number of letters. Christmas came and passed, and the new year, with its mantle of snow, was here. Mrs. Hollywood had not for some time heard from Fleta, and her forebodings were not good. Judge Chalmers had been to see her and told her in all candor that he was afreid that Oswin had gone back to his old tricks. If Mrs. Hollywood was uneasy before, she was made doubly so by this exposition. She still hoped for the best, but alas! a letter blasted her expectations, and a newspaper detailing an account of a large emrezzlement confirmed her fears.

It falls on washing so that clothes have to be rewashed; it gets gets into the houses and into the food, the furniture, pianos, libraries, beds and bedding, and by falling on the walks is tramped in upon the floors and carpets, depreciating the premises and property 50 per cent. Such are the complaints set forth, even more minutely than this, in If this injunction is made to stick, it is predicted that the mills and factories, of be also liable. The matter is, therefore, one in which "haste should be made slowly." Council Bluffs industries of all kinds need all the encouragement they can legitimately be given. Perhaps some day the city may be large enough to warrant a general war on soft coal, but it is far from being a Pittsburg yet. It seems, though, that some change could be made by which the cause of complaint in the Bloomer school building case ould be done away with. A new fire apparatus might be needed, but as the building is heated by steam, there seems no need of changing the pipes and per-haps not the boiler. If a small expenditure would remedy the trouble, it ought to be remedied, but if as some say, it will cost $2,000 to $3,000, besides an additional cost of coal, there should be some great cause of griovance to warrant such a New York Herald.
